

Raphaneal Foley

Community Health Advocate

Raphaneal Foley has worked as a community health educator with extensive knowledge of planning, organizing, and providing health education programs to low-income communities. Through her training classes and informational materials for the homeless population and community members, she has promoted health improvements and assisted in reducing problems with chronic diseases.

As a Christian Counselor, Raphaneal Foley has served as a Chaplin of the Houston League of Business and Professional Women, in addition to working as a Community Health Worker Instructor at the University of Houston, Honors College. She obtained her B.A. and Master's from Texas Southern University.